WORD FROM PARIS IS THAT KIAOCHOW GOES TO JAPANESE

Belief Is Also Advanced That China Will Sign German Treaty

HOLDS ALL RIGHTS

Nippon Retains Economic Control Of Railway And Concession

UP IN U.S. SENATE

Controversy On Shantung Between Parties Grows More Bitter

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 21.—Since the signature of the treaty of peace Japan has reiterated her promise to the Allies to restore Shantung to China and only to retain economic control of the railways and the Kiaochow Concession. It is believed the Chinese delegates in Paris will eventually sign the treaty of peace.

It is stated that the former Austrian Concession in Tientsin will revert to China.

Expects China To Sign

Paris, July 22.—The Chinese Government is expected soon to sign the Peace Treaty after the explanation from the Peace Conference that Japan's pledge to restore Shantung to China was not given to China alone but to all the Allies. The Japanese will withdraw their troops from Shantung but will retain economic control of the railways of the provinces and will also receive possession of the German concession of Kiaochow.

Senate Fight Bitter

Washington, July 21.—The controversy in the Senate between the Democrats and Republicans on the peace treaty, especially with regard to Shantung, becomes increasingly bitter.

To Announce Date

Paris, July 23.—A strong possibility prevails that China will sign the German Treaty, in return for which the Japanese Peace Mission in Paris will make public the oral agreement made at the time of the Chinese settlement announcing the date on which Japan agreed to restore Chinese political rights in the Shantung Peninsula.

China has already made known her decision to sign the Austrian Treaty.

Japanese Deny Report

Paris, July 23.—The Press Bureau of the Japanese Peace Delegation contradicts the statement that the decision of the settlement of the Shantung question came in exchange for the withdrawal of the Japanese amendment to the Covenant of the League of Nations regarding race equality, as the discussion on the racial clause had practically been closed in April, long before the Kiaochow question came before the Council of Four.

Bill To Declare Peace Introduced At Peking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 25.—A Bill dealing with the proposed declaration of peace with Germany was introduced in the House of Representatives yesterday afternoon, and after slight consideration discussion of the Bill was postponed for a week.

Charge Angers Japanese

Tokio, July 26.—Commenting on Shantung and the alleged treaty between Germany and Japan which is being given prominence by the United States Senate, the Jiji, quite contrary to its usual moderate tone, strongly condemns the bringing up of those questions as hasty and reckless and unwarrantably and unjustly victimising Japan. "If it be a move on the part of the Republicans in hostility of President Wilson they must be considered as playing with too dangerous a weapon whereby Japan, America's traditional friend, is singled out as if the successor of Prussianism, against which she fought with her Allies."

The Jiji deeply deplores that such utterances should be heard on the floor of such an august assembly. The absence of Japan's territorial ambition in China has been stated in most definite terms by Japan's delegates and by the Minister for Foreign Affairs more than once, leaving no doubt in any fairminded intelligence. The alleged Germano-Japanese Treaty is a malicious fabrication possible only for a hasty judgment to pay any attention to it. The paper fears that the reception of such a question will be seriously detrimental to the credit and prestige of the Senate as well as to a great party.

Ask More Doctors To Help Fight Choleraic Epidemic Which Continues To Spread

Need Physicians' Aid Briefly Each Day At Hospital, Giving Present Overworked Staff Respite, Is Announcement Issued

Foreign doctors who can devote about two hours a day to the work, giving the present overworked staff a respite, are the imperative need at the Red Cross Summer Diseases Hospital—where the brunt of the fight against the choleraic diarrhea epidemic is being borne—according to a statement given yesterday by the vice-president of the hospital, Mr. Tou Yao-ting.

Funds and additional hospital space for the care of convalescent and mild cases are other needs almost as pressing, but the principal call is for doctors and for competent Chinese attendants and nurses. The two foreign doctors and the Chinese staff are at present on duty practically without relief throughout the day. The hospital officials feel that if a few foreign doctors will engage to give an hour or two of time to supervising matters each day it will give the needed surcease to the present staff and meet the situation.

Money Also Is Needed

As to funds, it was stated by Mr. Tou that $30,000 is needed to tide the institution through the four months' season, of which $10,000 has been subscribed.

The institution has only enough money to exist till the end of the month, when the staff draws its salary for the first time since its reopening two weeks ago, according to Mr. Tou. The hospital is independent, he said. Although it bears the name of the Red Cross Society, the society contributes nothing except the rental of the buildings, the use of the motor ambulance and the beds and blankets left over last year. Mr. Tou pointed out that after the retirement of Mr. Shen Tun-ho as the co-director of the Red Cross Society of China a decision was arrived at, for some reason or other, by the central committee of the Society not to re-open the summer disease hospital. One reason that the committee offered was that during the entire season last year, only 15 cases of choleraic diarrhoea were recorded out of the some 1,500 miscellaneous cases handled by the hospital.

How Project Was Launched

Later, an inquiry was made by Dr. Arthur Stanley as to what Mr. Shen Tun-ho proposed to do this season about summer diseases. Upon being told the decision of the committee, Dr. Stanley pointed out that cases of cholera have appeared in Foochow and Amoy and that it would be well to provide for possible need in Shanghai. Messrs. Shen Tun-ho, Chu Pao-san and Tou then organised a committee of 50 to raise funds to resume the work of the hospital upon their own initiative and agreed to be responsible for the finance, if contributions should prove to be insufficient.

In response to an appeal of Mr. Tou for the hospital, Mr. Thomas F. Cobbs, general manager of the B. A. T., has consented to donate a substantial sum towards the expenses of the institution. Other foreigners are also contemplating contributions, but up to the present no other definite pledges have been forthcoming.

The number of cases treated by the hospital during the two weeks of its operation has already doubled that of the entire season of four months last year. Up to 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the number stood at 2,882, of which cases 1,084 necessitated the transfusion of the saline solution, while 221 patients have died.

There are only 22 Cox Transfusion Instruments belonging to the inventor and left for the service of the institution and no more instruments can be obtained, Mr. Tou explained that so far as he knows, there are no others in Shanghai. It is impossible for the doctors to order new ones, because they have not the time to test them. The testing requires considerable time, as any instrument whose filtering candle allows the passage of air bubbles will endanger the life of the patient. The operation for the saline transfusion, however, is simple. It takes only about three

Denies Demand For Concession Austria Held Was Rejected By Council Of Five

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 20.—The Italian Peace Delegation states that it is untrue that the Council of Five has rejected Italy's claims to the former Austrian Concession in Tientsin. Italy only wishes that the Chinese Government within a year shall carry through the work of draining the swampy lands which border the Italian Concession and improve the navigation of the Pei-ho River near the Italian Settlement.

Peking, July 25.—Mr. Huang Yung-ling, Commissioner of Foreign Intercourse at Tientsin, has suggested to the Government that a fund should be established to cover the cost of improving the sanitary condition of the Austrian Concession.

A Lady Luminary Is Among Us Unbidden And Unwelcomed

In ye aynciente days when the gods used to sit about on Mount Catawampus discussing the fashions over tall foaming flagons of a long-lost brand of likker known as ambrosia—there was little or no local option in them days—one of the most popular and engaging young deities on the membership roster was a Miss Venus, whose first name has not been handed down by the historians.

Times have changed.

On Sunday afternoon for the first time in a considerable spell this Venus person pulled off an unheralded debut in the southwestern heavens, basking flambuoyantly in full view of Shanghai, and forthwith became about as popular with people living hereabouts as a dose of castor oil. Since her appearance the young lady has been more the topic of conversation than when in the old days she came out two weeks ahead of Mrs. Juno and the rest of the leading lady Olympians with the latest thing in fall hats.

Large knots of Chinese gathered in the streets of the Settlements and the Native City to make ominous remarks about the new arrival. According to the consensus of opinion her appearance denoted little luck for this part of the world. A casual auditor would have gathered that she was about as dangerous as any other lady.

Famine, war, pestilence and flood were a few of the milder prognostications hazarded by the observers after taking a look at the twinkling luminary. The old timers pointed out that the last time the planet held a daylight coming out party was some 59 years ago in the twelvemonth preceding the Taiping Rebellion and all the ills accompanying it. That was in the year of the "ram"—the last of the 60-year cycle—just as it is this year. It looked like a duplication of events.

A number of handbills sprang mysteriously into circulation. The portent indicated a wave of disease which would cut China's population in half, they stated, "try So-and-So's famous herb compound and insure life."

There has been a brisk call for amulets and charms from the priests and necromancers.

The newspapers also comment on the planet's appearance. The Hsin Shun Pao takes an optimistic view. It's opinion, expressed in more extended and elegant terms, is: "Well, things can't grow any worse, anyway."

ALLIED WORKERS IN BRITAIN MEET; MINES IN DANGER

Rail And Transport Men With Coal Men Holding Session In London

STRIKES CONTINUE

Properties In Yorkshire May Be Destroyed Due To Flooding

NAVY CALLED UPON

Call To Curtail Use Of Coal And Gas Issued By Government

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 23.—Momentous meetings of the executives of the Triple Alliance, namely the Railwaymen, Transport Workers and Miners Federation are fixed for London today to decide on further action. Mr. Smillie and other Labor leaders have arrived in London.

It is expected that the Miners Executive will meet Mr. Lloyd George tomorrow.

Meanwhile the deadlock in the mine fields continues and roughly a quarter of all the miners in the country are idle. The peril of the Yorkshire mines is being increased by the accumulation of gas, due to failure of ventilation, and precautions are being taken to prevent explosions. Six mines have already been flooded out.

Using Men Of Navy

Naval pumpers are working at three collieries and hotheads have threatened to retaliate by withdrawing the pumpers from public service.

The paralysation of industries is spreading and a hundred Trawlers are detained at Grimsby.

The Government is issuing a warning in the Midlands to curtail the consumption of gas, electricity and water and the local authorities are advised to prepare schemes for the conservation of their resources.

Smillie Is Presiding

London, July 23.—At the conference of the Triple Alliance Mr. Smillie presided and three hundred delegates were present.

The Conference passed a resolution by 217 votes to 11 recommending its constituent bodies to ascertain whether their members are prepared to take industrial action to enforce their demands; namely the abolition of conscription, the discontinuance of military intervention in Russia and also in trade disputes in Great Britain, the blockade and the release of conscientious objectors.

The Railway Executive announce that the Miners' strike may necessitate a considerable reduction in the passenger than service forthwith.

Sir Eric Geddes has telegraphed the Municipal Authorities in Yorkshire, Lancashire, Notts and Derby urging the absolute necessity of economising coal.

Report Asked For

London, July 21.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Kennedy Jones asked the Prime Minister what the situation was in the Yorkshire coal area.

Mr. Lloyd George, who was loudly cheered, said that the last twenty-four hours had witnessed a grave and unprecedented development in the dispute. The miners, unfortunately, had called out the pumpmen and enginemen and thus many of the mines were threatened with destruction.

Fifty-eight mines requiring men are at present working; pumping had entirely stopped at eighty-five, the officials were pumping at thirty-five and pumping was continuing at twenty-two. Three mines were already flooded and twelve others would probably be flooded within a day or two. These circumstances obviously treated (? threatened) a very dangerous situation. Some of the Yorkshire mines would be ruined in a few days by flooding and others would be shortly thrown out of occupation.

Second Largest Field

Continuing, the Premier said that the Yorkshire coalfield produced thirty-five million tons of coal a year, was the second largest in the kingdom and many industries depended on it. The Government, consequently, had been compelled to send men from the fleet to aid in pumping the mines. The Minister of Labor had sent a message to the Miners Federation asking what action they were prepared to take and notifying it that when the men returned to work the assistance given by the Government would be immediately withdrawn. Until then the Government would take every means possible to save the mines and afford every protection to those willing to help. A special commissioner was being sent to co-ordinate the efforts of the community to overcome the new and serious menace with which Yorkshire is threatened by the destruction of the mines and he appealed to the community for support. The acting of the miners in Yorkshire not only jeopardised their own means of livelihood but threatened with disaster everyone in the district in which they lived.

A. Bonar Law stated in the House of Commons today that six Yorkshire mines were flooded and 17 were endangered. He said 158 naval men were being employed without interference. A few pits had stopped in Derbyshire, where the strike was spreading. Naval men were there. There was no change in the Lancashire or Notts situations. A resolution has been passed by the South Wales miners in favor of remaining at work pending negotiations with the Government, but a considerable number are still on strike.

The Premier, Mr. Lloyd George, and Mr. Bonar Law will confer with the Miners' Executive on the 24th.

Has Serious Effect

London, July 22.—The Yorkshire strike is already having a serious effect on the Midlands. Three big Leeds firms closed yesterday. A similar situation exists in Sheffield. It is estimated that 15,000 steel workers are idle today.

London, July 22.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Sir Donald Maclean, Mr. A. Bonar Law said that the coal situation in Yorkshire was practically unchanged. Pumping had stopped in a few more mines but had been resumed in a few.

The strike had slightly spread elsewhere. 7,500 men were out in Lancashire and 20,000 in Monmouthshire.

The real issue on which the strike had occurred was very difficult to say. Reasons assigned in various mines were the increased price of coal, the excessive food prices, our presence in Russia and objections to conscription. He did not believe any particular person was behind the unrest.

London, July 21.—The Government has deputed Sir Eric Geddes to take charge of the pumping arrangements in all the Yorkshire mines. The Government feels that if the mines are allowed to be flooded the position will be analogous to the French coalfields after the German evacuation—namely, the mines will be destroyed.

Welsh Continue Work

London, July 22.—The Welsh Miners' Conference has decided to continue work until the Executive of the Miners' Federation has fixed new rates for piece work with the Government.

The strike of 2,000 miners at Walsall has collapsed.

The collieries at Bolton are working as usual, with the exception of a few small pits.

The Lancashire and Cheshire Miners Federation has circularised the men advising them to remain at work in accordance with the decision of the Keswick Conference.

The position in the Sheffield area grows more serious. The water difficulty is no threat in this area. Up to the present the officials have maintained the pumping at the Nunnery Pits, thus preventing a disaster, but already 12,000 men in Sheffield are idle owing to the strike and it is anticipated that this number will reach 60,000 by the 26th.

There is a growing demand for the Government effecting a settlement.

Cause Of Trouble

London, July 22.—The cause of the sudden strike of Yorkshire miners hitherto has not been clear. It is authoritatively declared today that the dispute has arisen from practical application of the award in the Sankey interim report and the effect upon piece rates. The men claim that they are entitled to higher wages than are offered. The Government recognised that a compromise was justified in certain areas owing to the current conditions.

At the meeting of the Miners' Federation last week Mr. Smillie urged the men to work pending negotiations and it is asserted that the Federation deprecates the present strike.

On the other hand the miners allege that the strike is partly due to the increased price of coal which came into operation yesterday and which also brought out 61,000 protesting miners in Derbyshire, Notts and Burnley.

The gravity of the situation in Yorkshire is greater because this is the first time in a big mining dispute that the pumpmen have been withdrawn.

The action of the Government in despatching 5,000 naval stokers for pumping is generally approved.

Strikes Begin And End

London, July 23.—Monmouthshire miners numbering 10,000 have resumed work but a further 10,000 Mansfield miners have struck while, contrary to the advice of their President, the Notts Miners Association has passed a resolution in favor of continuing on strike as long as the Yorkshire miners are out.

The Triple Alliance Conference rejected by 144 votes to 84 a motion by Mr. Ben Tillett in favor of holding the proceedings in public.

Paris, July 23.—In the Chamber of Deputies today, M. Loucher, the Minister of Reconstruction, stated that as British coal now cost France 135 francs per ton, France had turned to America where she was able to buy coal more cheaply.

ACTING PREMIER OFFERS PLAN TO RESTORE PEACE

Drafting Of Constitution And Election Of Parliament Are Things Suggested

(Reuter's Service)

Peking, July 25.—According to the Shuntien Shih Pao Mr. Kung Hsin-chan, Acting Premier, has made the following suggestions relating to negotiations between the North and the South.

1. That a similar number of delegates should be appointed by the Northern and Canton Parliaments, that the old and the new drafts of the Constitution should be submitted to the delegation, and that a draft arranged between the two groups of delegates should be referred to their respective Parliaments.

2. That a new Parliament be then elected in accordance with the provisions of the new draft, and that the two old Parliaments be dissolved.

3. That the delegation as a whole be competent to draft laws governing Parliament and the election of Members.

TREATY'S PROVISIONS DISCUSSED IN COMMONS

Leader Of Opposition Urges Definite Indemnity Should Have Been Expected

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 21.—The House of Commons was full for the debate on the second reading of the treaty of peace and the Anglo-French agreement bills.

The leader of the opposition, Sir Donald Maclean, opening the discussion, urged that a definite indemnity from Germany should be fixed and the trial of the ex-Kaiser should be held in a neutral country because his trial in London would be too dignified and might arouse sympathy.

Mr. J. R. Clynes, Vice-Chairman of the Labor party, said that the Labor party was conscious that the crime of the German Government was colossal but it feared that the penalty imposed on certain sections of the German people might be too heavy. He asked the Premier to reassure the working classes with regard to conscription and armaments, which should be solely under Government control.

Mr. G. N. Barnes, a Labor member of the Cabinet, urged that labor everywhere should take full advantage of the labor clauses of the peace treaty in order to improve the position of labor.

Lord Robert Cecil urged that all treaties should be periodically revised. He hoped this would be done with the peace treaty.

Mr. Joseph Devlin paid a tribute to Mr. Lloyd George and appealed for a more enlightened Irish policy along the principles of President Wilson and Smuts.

Mr. Horatio Bottomley moved an amendment regretting that the peace treaty does not impose on Germany binding obligations to make good to Great Britain her total financial cost of the war.

Colonel Claude Lowther seconded the above amendment, which the House of Commons rejected.

Paris, July 22.—The whole of the French press comment in most generous terms in connection with the very speedy ratification by Great Britain of the Anglo-French treaty. The keynote of the comment is "He gives twice who gives quickly."

London, July 22.—The House of Commons today ratified the Anglo-French convention unanimously.

RIOTING IN HONGKONG DUE TO RICE SHORTAGE

Police Are Mobbed And Shops Looted Before Disturbances Are Put Down

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, July 27.—The dearness of rice has led to an outbreak of rioting in Hongkong and the Yaumati, Mongkok and Hunghom districts in Kowloon by professional agitators. The police were mobbed. Numerous arrests were made.

Scanty supplies and the abnormal demand from Japan and foreign countries, accentuated by adverse exchange in Saigon, has caused the price of rice to soar until Saigon white quality rice rose to $20.00 per picul on the 25th.

Meanwhile, the Government, in co-operation with the leading Chinese have been devising measures for urgent relief, which include the purchase of 27,000 tons from the Singapore Government, which will shortly arrive, with a view to its distribution and sale at cost price.

The Hongkong stock consists of 20,000 tons.

The Government scheme is ready to be put in operation tomorrow, but agitators precipitately started looting the rice shops today.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock in the morning looters began to take away rice from some of the shops in the Wanchai district, in Hongkong. The police promptly effected some arrests.

At 3:25 this afternoon the Central Police Station received a message that a riot had broken out on First Street in the West Point district, and that the rice shops were being looted.

At 3:30 the looting became more widespread, the shops along Connaught Road, West Bonham Strand and Tithing Lane being rushed by looters and rice carried away. Armed patrols under European inspectors were sent out to the eastern, western and central districts, and a number of the looters were arrested in the act of carrying off rice from the shops. Ten were marched off to the Central Station and others were locked up in the district Stations. The police experienced little difficulty in dealing with the mob when they came across them.

Looting began simultaneously in the Shaukiwan, Mongkok and Yaumati Districts, in Kowloon, in the afternoon. The riffraff started in a small way at Mongkok. The police made some arrests, and, the news spreading, the shops began closing up. Only a few at Mongkok and Yaumati continued to sell rice at cheap rates. The natives mobbed the shops and seized the rice until all the retail supplies were depleted. Unlike Hongkong, the police met with difficulties in controlling the rioters, one or two ugly instances being recorded of the mob stoning the police from the streets and from windows. One foreign constable was badly bruised on the right cheek by a brick.

At Yaumato, as at Shaukiwan, the European and Indian police were compelled to fire their revolvers in the air to intimidate the crowds and while leading arrested rioters to the Yaumati Station the police were followed by crowds bent on trouble.

Thanks to the energy and tact of Inspector Gerard the situation at Yaumati is well in hand. Constables are stationed at the rice shops to prevent further trouble.

At Yaumati, as at Shaukiwan, the Hunghom Station telephoned Yaumati for assistance. Hunghom, Wanchai and Shaukiwan Stations are being reinforced by men from the Central Station.

The police do not anticipate that the trouble will grow more serious. The Government is issuing a proclamation tomorrow morning reducing the price of rice. The proclamation will be posted up at daylight.

Proclamations Issued

Hongkong, July 28.—The Government has issued two proclamations:

The first, which is signed by the Food Controller, states that the Government has taken over control of all the rice in the Colony for sale according to three qualities at $21, $15 and $12.50 respectively. All retail shops are required to separate their stocks into three grades to be examined by persons appointed by the Controller. The quantity and quality of all rice imported into the Colony must be reported to the imports and exports department as early as possible and must not be sold without the express permission of the Food Controller. All stocks of over a hundred bags must be reported to the Food Controller, together with all forward contracts entered into by dealers.

The second proclamation, which is issued by the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, recites in the preamble that the high price of rice is due to the war and the world prices of all foodstuffs. The Government has instituted sales of rice from today which will be sold at rates approximating two lakhs of dollars a month. If possible further reductions in price will be made hereafter. The people are enjoined to keep the peace, it being pointed out that disturbances will not help them or anybody else.

The riceshops are reopening this afternoon. The Food Controller is busy inaugurating the scheme for the sale and distribution of rice on Government account which comes into operation today. The Acting Governor has been visiting the districts where the disturbances occurred in Hongkong and Kowloon. It is believed that the populace will be amenable to reason and a recrudescence of the disturbances is not expected.

AFGHANISTAN DELEGATES PROVING RECALCITRANT

Are Unmoved By Warning That Patience Of Britain Is Not Inexhaustible

(Reuter's Service)

Simla, July 27.—Reuter's special correspondent at Rawal Pindi wires that after Sir Hamilton Grant's address at the Peace Conference yesterday, Ali Ahmad, the Chief of the Afghan delegation, in the course of a speech, urged forbearance on both sides.

He denied that the Afghans first sought peace, admitted that the British were superior in war materials and man power, but pointed out the Germans held a similar position in the European war. The Afghans were not a sleepy, ignorant people roused to fresh aspirations like other nations in the European war. He uttered a warning that Afghanistan is a safe barrier between Bolshevism and India. If the war was renewed and the British won, India would be flooded with Bolshevism. Afghanistan seeks only a just and honorable peace.

The Conference is sitting in camera. The Afghans proving obstinate and unreasonable, the meeting soon dissolved.

Warning Received Coldly

Rawal Pindi, July 26.—Sir Hamilton Grant addressed the Afghan delegates in strong terms, stating that the British Government would be amply justified in continuing the war till the Amir surrendered unconditionally. The Government was not prepared to consider counter claims and demands. The Afghans had flagrantly disregarded the terms of the Armistice and British patience was not inexhaustible. If the war was renewed, the terms would be different.

The Afghan delegates listened without a murmur but their demeanour was hard and unsmiling.

Delegates Arrive

Simla, July 25.—Reuter's special correspondent at Rawalpindi reports on the 25th:

Sir Hamilton Grant made his state arrival yesterday.

The Afghan Delegates also arrived from Dakka quite quietly in the morning. There were about 65 in the party. The principal officials were dressed in grey German-like uniforms with Astrakan headgear. They proceeded to their residences in motors, accompanied by Indian officials.

The delegates expressed pleasure concerning the comfortable journey and also catering, and surprise at the size of the British camps, guns and transport en route. The whole party have a pleased look and resemble people on a holiday jaunt.

The Peace Conference opens formally on Saturday morning.

Simla, July 21.—A letter from the Amir to the Viceroy dated July 18 states that the Afghan peace delegates will arrive in the British lines on the 24th.

Fighting Is Reported

Simla, July 20.—Chitral reports that three hundred Afghan regulars and tribesmen reached the Bumboret Valley, eight miles south of Chitral, but were driven off.

It is reported that a body of Afghan regulars have occupied the passes between Kafiristan and Chitral.

Injunction Sought Against Transfer Of Mine Title Refused

Application Of Sharebroker Following Absconding Of Chinese Is Denied

An application for an injunction to restrain the Shanghai Exploration and Development Company from parting with or transferring title deeds of the Mentoukou Sino-Foreign Coal Mining Co. was dismissed by Sir Havilland de Sausmarez in the British Supreme Court yesterday.

The application was brought by Mr. J. A. Hayes, represented by G. H. Wright, and asked that the injunction operate until determination of an action brought in the Mixed Court by Mr. Hayes against Chow Ah-ping, former compradore of Messrs. George McBain and one of the registered owners of the mining concession. The defendants were represented by Mr. W. A. C. Platt.

Mr. Hayes, in his affidavit, sets forth that Chow Ah-ping absconded early this month and that the Mixed Court claim is for Tls. 27,969.38 which he was owing to plaintiff. Appellant understood that Chow Ah-ping by agreement with the defendant company is entitled to a royalty of 1 percent on the profits of the mining company and asked the injunction to prevent his taking steps to have the title transferred, Messrs. McBain having refused to give an undertaking in the matter.

An affidavit in reply by Mr. R. S. F. McBain states that the former compradore left on June 26 without warning, and was owing the company a large sum of money. It sets forth the history of the acquisition of the mining concession and the agreement with Chow whereby he became a trustee, stating that he at no time enjoyed any beneficial interest in the concession, as alleged, and, there having been no profits derived from the working of the concession, that nothing is due him as remuneration.

A further affidavit by Mr. Hayes refers to the mining laws of China in an attempt to show that a half share of the concession must belong beneficially to a Chinese subject.

Mr. Wright argued for the application and the Court refused it without calling on opposing counsel, granting the defendants costs.

Hospital Calls For Help From Doctors

minutes for the doctor to perform one operation. But utmost care must be taken after the injection is performed. Therefore a big staff of trained nurses is essential.

According to Mr. Tou, patients of the better class, of which the number has been small so far, have in several instances sacrificed their lives because they refuse to lay side by side with the coolie class, which forms the bulk of the cases, but insisted on having first class rooms, which are crowded to capacity. Mr. Tou related an interesting story about his own brother, Mr. Tou Yu-sun who was seized with the disease four days ago and whom Mr. Tou placed among the coolie patients. He is doing well at the Shanghai Chinese Isolation Hospital now. Mr. Tou's action has enabled the staff to bring some of the wealthier patients to a more reasonable view of the matter.

Because of the crowded condition of the hospital, it is out of the question to allow convalescents to stay there. The Shanghai Chinese Isolation Hospital, Chapei, and the Red Cross Town Hospital have both been turned over for this particular use. No operations are, however, performed at these places. About 120 convalescent invalids are being treated at each of these institutions.

The staff of the Summer Diseases Hospital consists of two foreign doctors, Drs. H. C. Patrick and Tootell; nine Chinese doctors, Drs. Woo Siao-koh, Zee Sun-dong, Lee Teh-bai, Yang Chong-fu, Wang Shih-kong and Nyiun Chi-yu of Shanghai, and Drs. Dzung and Sung of Hangchow, and 20 Chinese male nurses.

Must Defray Burial Expenses

It is stated that about 60 percent of the dead are of so poor a class as to be unable to defray their own burial expenses and the hospital is caring for this detail. Coffins are being purchased at a rate of $16 each and blankets and hire of coolies to carry the remains to the Pao An Dong Public Cemetery come to an additional $5 or thereabouts. The dead are cared for in a special room at the rear of the hospital and it was stated yesterday that there is no undue delay in their removal to the cemetery and that every precaution is observed to prevent the spread of infection, all articles used by the victims being thoroughly disinfected.

Need Convalescent Quarters

The hospital, as stated before, is literally crowded beyond capacity and every possible corner is being fitted up in an attempt to care for all cases which apply. In this connection the establishment of branches in or near the central district for the care of the convalescent is much needed and the hospital authorities are trying to obtain unleased premises for the purpose. According to Mr. Tou, landlords are refusing to rent their property for this use because they fear subsequent difficulty in disposing of the property.

Dempsey's Terrific Attack Overwhelms Jess Willard, Champion Is Easily Beaten

Challenger Sends Kansan To Floor Six Times In First Round; Willard Quits At End Of Third; 45,000 See Fight

Toledo, Ohio, July 4.—Jack Dempsey won the heavyweight championship of the world this afternoon in an affair which was not a battle, but a slaughter. Never in the history of the American ring has a heavyweight champion offered such a spectacle in defense of his title as that of Willard today. From sixty seconds after the fight began Dempsey punched Willard virtually at will.

The end of the fight came 30 seconds after the finish of the third round, when Willard's seconds threw two towels into the middle of the canvas, signifying that their man was unable to come up for the fourth round. While Willard was not actually counted out by Referee Pecord, the result constitutes a technical knockout, and will be so recorded.

When the towels flashed through the air Willard's face was a mass of blood, while Dempsey was spattered on his breast and his back with the blood of his opponent. Jess's right eye was completely closed, there was a freely bleeding cut beneath his eye, his mouth was bleeding profusely, six teeth were out, and the whole right side of his face was swollen to almost twice its normal size. Dempsey had not one mark.

So terrific was the punishment which Willard received, so weak was he, so incapable of defense, that during the third round shouts of "Stop it! Stop it!" rose from many parts of the arena, in which were 45,000 spectators of one of the poorest fights in the history of boxing, the onlookers including 500 women. It was a fight which was unpleasant to watch, which brought none of the thrills of fine strife, and which gave no satisfaction to any one except those who had bet on Dempsey, and even these thought little of the spectacle except as a kind of pugilistic murder.

The spectators, indeed, were rather dazed with the complete collapse of the champion, and the amazing speed with which the beginning of the end came. The battle opened with a feeling out process by both men. Willard managed to get two punches to Demsey's face. Then Jack let out. He put over a smashing right to the jaw and a left to the stomach. Willard's 245 pounds of weight crashed to the canvas. His title was gone right there.

A roar rose that could have been heard out in Lake Erie. Willard was near the edge of the north side of the ring, and struggled to a sitting posture. He seemed utterly dazed, but there was a fatuous smile upon his lips. At the count of six, he staggered to his feet. The remaining two minutes of the round saw the champion knocked down five more times, and battered twice to the ropes. Helpless, he could not defend himself; he could not hit back; his immense bulk was almost as helpless as if he had been a child.

It was the whistle which saved Willard in this round from a knockout, for at this fight a whistle was used, military fashion, instead of the time-honored gong. Seven seconds before the round ended, Dempsey knocked Willard down for the sixth time. The champion was in the southwest corner of the ring, having landed on the floor from the ropes. Pecord began to count, "one, two, three, four, five six, seven," he counted, amid bedlam. Then the whistle, inaudible except to those at the immediate ringside, sounded. Jess was saved for a few minutes longer.

As Willard was taken to his corner the Dempsey crowd shrieked in ecstacy, not having heard the gong and thinking that the fight had ended by a knockout. Some enthusiasts burst over the sixty-dollar seats and clambered into the ring to shake Jack's hands, but they were waved back and shooed out of the ring. "It's not over," the officials yelled, and then the whistle blew for the second round.

Dempsey backed Willard into the ropes almost at once and began to pump his deadly left into Willard's countenance. In a few seconds the Dempsey heavy artillery showed its effect, and Jess's right eye became completely closed. Then came the opening of the cut on Willard's right cheek. Willard made a feeble attempt to fight back. But had nothing. He was too weak and tried to save himself by hanging on in the clinches. Pecord kept prying the men apart.

Dempsey himself seemed rather tired in this round from the effect of the constant hitting of Willard's bulk and from the heat, which was 110 degrees at the ringside during the fight. The round ended without Willard having been knocked down, but he was one of the worst battered champions ever beheld.

When the third round began Willard showed the least iota of an attempt to fight back but he could not land on Dempsey. Then Jack opened up the artillery again. He made nothing more or less than a chopping block of the champion. He punched Willard four times in succession in the face. These blows smashed up Willard's mouth pretty badly and knocked out some of the six teeth which Jess lost during the fracas. Willard's face could hardly be seen for blood. Dempsey continued to uppercut Willard with his left, and cries of "Stop it! Stop it!" rose in everincreasing volume. But Willard weathered the round without being knocked down. If it had not been for his immense reserve of strength he would have been knocked out in the first round. In the third round Dempsey again showed fatigue from his own exertions.

Seconds Give Up Fight

Then came the whistle for the end of the round. In another 30 seconds Ray Archer threw one towel from Willard's corner, followed at once by another towel thrown by Monahan. The crowd shrieked. Dempsey's friends rushed toward the ring, and the world had another heavyweight champion.

The spectators had two different views of Willard's behavior as far as pluck is concerned. Some gave him praise for coming up for the last two rounds in the condition he was in and taking the frightful beating which Dempsey gave him. Others declared he showed lack of heart by not coming up to the scratch for the fourth round and losing his title by standing on his feet until the last.

"How did he ever beat Johnson?" was the general question. Certain it is that Willard was in no condition to enter a ring. When he first stepped on the canvas it was noted that he showed not one trace of pink. His skin had a peculiar olive-drab hue. Dempsey was as brown as an Indian. Willard's paucity of fighting since he won the title from Johnson in Havana in April, 1915, his age, and his lack of hard training for the bout tell the story of his poor condition. The fight he made was pitiful for a world's champion. The Jamaica Kid, Dempsey's sparring partner, undoubtedly could have put up an infinitely better battle than did Big Jess.

For their nine minutes of fighting the battlers received a fortune. Willard drew down $100,000 from Tex Rickard, the promoter of the bout; something like $20,000 from admissions to his training camp, and a percentage of the moving picture receipts. Dempsey received $27,500 from Rickard, about $20,000 from admissions to his training camp, and a percentage of the movie receipts.

$500,000 Profit For Rickard

The crowd which witnessed the sad affair was not up to expectations. Along the upper sides of the great hectagonal arena, where were the $10 seats, there was but a mere sprinkling of spectators. The $15 seats, that come in next toward the ring, were not occupied any better than the cheaper locations. Even the choicer seats were not all taken, and, just before the start of the bout those in the cheap seats, in mass formation, plunged into the better seats.

The arena, which has a total capacity of 80,000, was not much more than half filled. Tex Rickard could not give an accurate estimate tonight, but he thought that the attendance was 45,000. The total receipts are estimated at about $1,000,000. If this estimate of receipts, which is the best obtainable, is correct, this leaves the promoter a net profit of about $500,000, as the expenses of the bout reached half a million.

What the crowd lacked in numbers, according to these estimates, it made up in quality. There were sporting men and club men and society men and business men and hotel men there who are known from one end of the country to the other. The visitors came from all the big cities, from as far south as New Orleans and as far west as San Francisco. There was a big contingent of New Yorkers.

Probably more women saw this fight than have ever witnessed a heavyweight battle in the United States. There was a section on the southwest side of the arena reserved for them. It was well filled. There was also a scattering of women throughout the arena.

$2,000,000 Placed In Bets

The betting on the fight was light for a championship battle. Early this morning the odds were at even money. Then came the New York and other contingents with Willard coin, and Willard again became the favorite. The prevailing odds, when the men entered the ring were 5 to 4 on Willard. It is estimated about $2,000,000 was wagered in all.

The day's proceedings at the arena started at 11 o'clock, when the first preliminary, of which there were six, was staged. The amusement ended at 4:20½, when the towels acted as a curtain to the event. The main bout started at 4:09, the fighters having entered the ring shortly before 4 o'clock. Dempsey was the first to appear, climbing into his corner, the northwest, at 3:57. He got a big cheer. At 3:58 Willard took his corner, the southeast. His reception was not quite as uproarious as that for his rival.

The champion walked across the ring to Dempsey's corner. He shook hands with Demsey and said: "Hello, Jack, how are you, Jack? All right?"

Dempsey grinned, and responded: "You bet."

In Willard's corner were Ray Archer, Jack Hempel and Walter Monahan. In the Dempsey corner were Jack Kearns, Jimmie De Forest and Bill Tate.

At 4:07 o'clock the fighters went to the center of the ring. They were photographed shaking hands and then were cautioned by Referee Pecord. Then the fight began.

One Thermometer At 120

The day was clear and excessively hot throughout. At 1:30 p.m. a thermometer at the ringside registered 120 degrees. A slight breeze occasionally stirred, and every time it did it was greeted by cheers from the fans. Once a cloud obscured the sun for a minute and it was also applauded. Nearly every man in the arena had his coat off and his handkerchief tucked under his hat. It was a white crowd sartorially, and to look over the shimmering masses of silk shirts, with the sun beating on them, was to risk eye trouble from the reflection.

One hundred enthusiasts reached the arena as early as 5 o'clock in the morning, although the gates did not open until 8:30. These were holders of ten-dollar tickets for rush seats, who were afraid they would not get their choice, but they need not have worried.

At 11 o'clock there were 8,000 persons in the arena.

Although there was not as great a crowd at the arena as had been expected, Toledo was jammed. Many persons slept last night in their automobiles and in hotel rotundas. It was difficult to get anything to eat this morning, because of the crowds in the hotels and restaurants.

Willard and Dempsey spent a quiet day until they left for the ring. Dempsey was up at 6:30 o'clock and had a breakfast of oranges, poached eggs, and coffee. He ate dinner at noon. Willard got up at 9 o'clock, and at 10 ate a heavy breakfast, his only meal before the fight.

Tonight Toledo is wild with joy over the result of the fight, as Dempsey has made himself extremely popular here. Enthusiastic rooters are parading the town, and jollification is in the air.

Willard Helpless After First Round

At The Ringside, Toledo, Ohio, July 4.—The punch which started Jess Willard on his way to pugilistic oblivion came about a minute after the start of the first round. It was a sharp, short right crack on the jaw, followed by a left which Dempsey buried in the champion's stomach. This short right, which traveled not more than fifteen inches, shook the massive frame as Willard was backing toward the ropes on the north side of the ring. He went down with a crash, but was soon up in a sitting posture with face toward the east. Dempsey's terrific right punch had turned him halfway around as he went down.

That blow was the beginning of the end, for when Jess got up he ran headlong into a frenzied, wild-eyed battler, who knew that victory was within his grasp. Until that punch, the opening round had been tame. Dempsey fooled Willard at the start, when he came from his corner quietly and cautiously. Willard and his backers had expected the same kind of a football rush which Jack had used in all his fights. They expected that Dempsey would rush at the champion just as he had rushed at big Fred Fulton.

Dempsey came out of his corner the personification of a calculating fighter. His step was springy, and he glided around softly, waiting for the champion to make his lead. Willard stuck out his long, left arm and jabbed Dempsey lightly in the face. He then tried to follow with a right to the body, and the fighters came to a clinch. At the order of Referee Pecord, Willard stepped away with both arms free, and Dempsey did the same.

Again Dempsey glided around the towering plainsman, Willard sticking to the center of the ring. With head down, Jack rushed his opponent and shot a hard right to Willard's body at close quarters. He repeated the blow before he backed away. Jess grinned his silly grin and did not appear to be disturbed. Perhaps he wasn't, but those two rib roasters looked as if they hurt.

Again the boxers clashed, and Jess tried to send in two uppercuts, but Dempsey did not appear to be bothered. Jess again tried his left jab. By this time Dempsey evidently knew that there was no sting in Willard's punches. None of them, except one left jab, had even sent his head out of position. He held his head low, the jaw a shining target for Willard's attack. This brief minute of sparring during which the men had come to clinch three times and Dempsey had learned that there was no steam in Willard's punches, worked like a tonic on the challenger.

Again Jack, with head down, bored into his massive opponent. His left, and then his right, shook the champion all over. Willard began to back away now, and again Dempsey's left shot to the stomach. As big Jess bent over under the pain of this crack to the body, Dempsey's right came up like a flash and caught him flush on the jaw. The champion dropped his left arm, groping for the ropes as he went down.

As his 245 pounds hit the canvas, the whole platform shook, and there was a sickening grin on the champion's face. He was going to get up as Referee Pecord leaned down to count over him, but Mongahan yelled from Willard's corner not to hurry. Jess got up on one knee and then rose to his feet. Little did the crowd know what was coming, no one ever dreamed that they were going to witness two long drawn-out minutes of the worst punishing a champion ever received in the ring. As soon as Willard was on his feet again, Dempsey's rush at the dazed, wavering titleholder, almost carried him off the floor. The crowd seemed to be all for Dempsey, who now made a target of Willard's face, and chopped and scraped the right side of the champion's head and face with his left and rocked his jaw with his right.

Down went Willard again. He struggled to his feet, and amid scenes of the wildest excitement Dempsey continued the bull-like rushes and another terrific right toppled over the tottering Willard. He saved himself from a hard bump on the canvas by hanging on the ropes. He was still on both feet, and while he was draped over the ropes Dempsey shot two terrific rights to his body and straightened him up. Relentlessly Dempsey went at him. He hit him when and where he pleased. Willard bewildered, staggering, and on the verge of a knockout, groped blindly about the ring, while Dempsey chopped the left side of his face until it was red and bruised.

The gruelling battering opened up a cut under the champion's eye. Blood was flowing down his cheek. Down Willard went again under the punishment.

The crowd, at first dumbfounded, finally awoke to what Dempsey was doing, and the whole arena flew up with wild clamor. "Finish him, Jack." "Knock him out," were shouts heard above the tumult. Dempsey worked as fighter never worked before. Willard by this time was unable to lift his hands from his sides. Six times Willard hit the floor, and twice besides he was knocked off his feet, only to hang on the ropes to save himself from a fall. Dempsey's arms worked like piston rods. He put in every ounce of strength he had to finish the champion. To Jess and his handlers the round seemed an age long. Monohan was frantic and waved his arms in excitement each time Jess went down. He entreated and implored his pal to get up. It seemed to the Willard crowd as if the round would never end.

The last time Dempsey howled the champion over on the ropes, they were in a neutral corner. The sun beat down on the bloodstained champion. Dempsey's energy seemed limitless. As the great soft frame was sprawled over the ropes, Dempsey shot pitiless smashes into his body, and then, when Jess straightened up on his feet, another shower of rights and lefts banged Willard's head back and forth. Then, putting all he had into one desperate effort Jack drove his right against the bruised left jaw and Willard tumbled over in a heap in a corner.

Thought Champion Counted Out

Under the terrific smashing the champion's brain was dulled. Pecord began to count over him as he sat up under the entreaties of his seconds. There was a glassy stare in his eyes and a meaningless grin on the cut and battered face.

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven," counted Pecord, and the shout which rent the air was so great that the spectators heard no more. As Pecord counted "seven" Timer W. Warren Barbour blew his whistle, which ended the round and saved Willard from a one-round defeat.

The crowd thought Willard had been knocked out. The great arena became a scene of wild disorder. Men left their seats, struggled over the backs of the men in front of them, and jumped over the press benches into the ring. They grabbed Dempsey and they kissed him. They slapped him on the back and fought savagely with one another to shake his hand. From Willard's corner Monahan and Hempel jumped, with the blast of the timer's whistle, and fairly dragged Willard to his corner. They threw the pail of ice water into his face. They put strong ammonia to his nostrils and did everything possible in that minute of rest to bring him back to consciousness.

The officials had a hard time clearing the ring. The referee ordered Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, out of the ring. Kearns thought the fight was over and started to take Dempsey through the ropes with him. Pecord told him that the bell had saved Willard, and he called Dempsey out for the second round.

"That's all wrong," yelled Kearns. "They are going to make us win this fight twice."

Second Round

The crowd had not got over the surprise before it was ordered to sit down. Every one thought Willard had been counted out. He was a sad-looking sight when he came up for the second round. The crowd shouted for Dempsey to go at him again. Willard was a badly beaten fighter. He could hardly lift his arms. Dempsey, too, was almost tired out. He continued his attack on Willard's bruised face. The left smashes which bounded off the champion's eye again broke open the cut, and blood streamed down his face.

Willard could not protect himself, and Jack sailed in with right and left smashes. They lacked the steam they had behind them in the opening round. Willard's right eye began to puff up and before the round was finished it was closed. The whole right side of his face was raw under the constant hammering. The human frame could not endure such punishment.

Dempsey was so tired that he leaned over on the massive Willard with fatigue. Jess blindly tried to uppercut him, but the blows had nothing behind them and did not even disturb the tiring Dempsey. Willard's last struggling efforts to land his right and left on Jack's jaws were pitiful to watch. Dempsey was so tired from pounding the champion that he did not lift his arms to protect himself. All the strength, vitality, and stamina of the great hulk of a man which used to be champion Jess Willard had vanished. This round was just one continuous performance of Dempsey clouting away at Willard, with the champion backing away helplessly at each blow.

Third Round

After the second round Willard's seconds worked hard and partly revived the champion. Dempsey was still tired from the terrific punching he had done in the first round. Willard immediately staggered into a clinch in the third round. Dempsey's left jabs had the champion's face swollen out of all proportions, even the blows of the tired challenger being enough to send Willard back.

As blow after blow went to Willard's mouth in this round the shattered teeth were knocked out—half a dozen of them. Willard was pounded almost beyond recognition. Dempsey was still active and shifty on his feet and constantly eluded the heavy frame of Jess in order to save his own sibbing strength. Willard at the end of the round vainly tried to rally. He was hitting aimlessly at Dempsey, who merely glided out of the way. When the timer's whistle blew Willard staggered to his corner and fell into his chair. He was bleeding from the cut under his eye and from the mouth. His left eye was closed and he was drunk with punishment.

As he flopped into his chair he talked it over with Archer and Monahan, and before the whistle to bring them up for the fourth round both Monahan and Archer threw towels into the ring, acknowledging the end. Willard had a humiliating time after the fight in getting out of the arena. On his way to the dressing room the men who had bet money on him hooted and jeered. No one praised him for standing up there in the second and third rounds to take more punishment after he had been virtually knocked out in the first.

Those who a few hours before had hailed him as the greatest heavyweight who ever had worn the crown turned against him and joined in the acclaim which welcomed the new title holder. Dempsey again was showered with plaudits and was hugged and kissed. Many of the women who had witnessed the bout and who had turned their heads away early in the fight now joined in cheering Dempsey.

AIR MAIL LINE LINKS UP NEW YORK AND CHICAGO

Route Is Completed, Giving An Eight-Hour Service Between The Two Cities

Washington, July 1.—The air mail route between New York and Chicago was completed today, according to an announcement by Second Assistant Postmaster General Praeger, when the Eastern half of the route between New York and Cleveland was linked up with the Western half from Cleveland to Chicago which has been in regular operation since May 15.

A fast flight was made today from New York to Cleveland at the average speed of 110 miles per hour —a distance of 430 miles. A new fast plane left New York at 5:15 a.m. and flew to Belfont, Pa., the first stop, at the rate of 123 miles per hour. Another plane took the mail from there to Cleveland at the rate of 100 miles per hour arriving at 9:30 a.m., Eastern time. The entire distance between New York and Chicago is about 750 miles.

Mail can now be sent by airplane from New York, leaving there about 5 a.m., and reaching Chicago about 1 p.m. Planes are changed at Belfont, Pa. and Cleveland. The air mail arrives in Cleveland in time to catch the plane leaving there at 9:30 a.m. for a non-stop flight to Chicago. About 13,000 letters a day are taken for Pacific Coast points, and through air mail service from New York to Chicago will advance the delivery of mail for Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities about 24 hours sooner than if sent from New York through by rail. This applies to letters received in New York post office for the 8:40 p.m. train westward.

Air mail from the West for New York and points East is taken on at Chicago and Cleveland. A plane leaves Chicago at 2:30 p.m., arriving at Cleveland at 5:30 p.m. in time to connect with the 20th Century Limited, and the mail arrives in New York about 9:00 o'clock the next morning. This gives the business men about three hours more to despatch mail from Chicago than if sent by train about noon. An airplane leaves Cleveland in the morning at 8:30, taking on all air mail from train connections, and mail arrives in New York about 1:00 p.m., a stop being made at Belfont, Pa., to change planes. This also gives the business men a late night service by train to Cleveland connecting with the morning plane at that point for New York and points East, and advancing mail delivery many hours over that by through train service.

Most of the planes used are remodelled DeHaviland fours with Liberty motors. They have a capacity of 400 pounds of mail.

Fliers Try Out Parachutes

Demonstrations in dropping from airplanes in parachutes were given at the College Park Air Mail Field, Washington, this afternoon by Mr. William Linley and Miss Sylva Boyden, the English aviatrix, representing two parachute concerns. The purpose of these demonstrations is to determine their practicability for use in protecting mail pilots in cross country flying in case of fire or other accidents which might make a landing by the plane impossible.

'Splash Me Doll' Now A Legal 'Vamp'

Miss Gene George Pfeffer

When Miss Gene George Pfeffer, a girl in society in San Jose, Cal., designed the little "vamp" known as the "Splash Me Doll" she had no idea how extensively that bisque young lady would vamp herself into public favor. To protect herself against imitators Miss Pfeffer sought and received an injunction restraining two big corporations from making or selling anything resembling the "Splash Me" siren, which she asserts is entirely her own creation. Miss Pfeffer is a graduate of Leland Stanford University and the Mark Hopkins Institute of Art.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."
J. E. SIMPSON, M. D., Chicago, Ill.

"A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."
J. S. ALEXANDER, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Have used your Castoria on various occasions in suitable cases and have found it a palatable and efficient laxative, especially in the various diseases of childhood."
CHAS. EDWARD GARDINER, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, and always obtain the desired result."
F. GERALD BLATTNER, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have prescribed Castoria to families for several years. It is all right. Mothers like it, for children will take it without any trouble."
C. A. WILSON, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Every day your complexion

pays toll to dust and wind

The rough, cold winds chap and roughen the skin; dry heated air draws and parches it. The constant strain under which we live—the ceaseless activity of crowded days, the constant effort, the lack of rest—all these things take daily toll of the complexion.

You can protect your complexion from the wear and tear of both summer and winter—can prevent that tired, drawn look from appearing in your face, by giving your skin the care it needs.

Apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream when you motor or travel; rub it in lightly. This will protect the sensitive pores from grit and grime, will keep your skin free from that parched feeling that generally follows exposure to dust and dirt.

It has a wonderfully beautifying effect, and as a base for powder it is so effective that one powdering is sufficient for the whole evening.

This fragrant, dewy cream contains a skin-softening ingredient of great value, one that skin specialists recognize as most efficient in keeping the skin supple, for giving it the transparent freshness everyone admires.

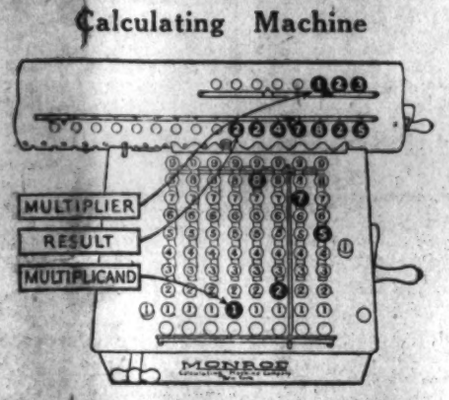
MONROE

Calculating Machine



Examine the diagram above. It shows why you cannot make a mistake with the Monroe. Note that Multiplier, Multiplicand and Result are always before you. The same thing holds good whether you are dividing, subtracting, or adding. This machine is so simple to operate, too. Anyone can do it, from the office-boy to you.

Use the Monroe on all figure work. Those long calculations of exchange, for instance, are done in seconds on the Monroe instead of minutes by any other method.

Yarn Market Report Issued In Hongkong

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, July 26.—Polishwalla Kotewalla's report on the yarn market says that the steady rise in cotton and the great scarcity of tonnage, as well as the great local demand for yarn in India, has materially strengthened the market which looks like going up further.

The sales for the fortnight totalled 6,500 bales and rates have advanced ten to fifteen dollars a bale.

Alex. Ross and Co.'s report on the piece goods market says that business has been brisk locally with a considerable movement of goods, the main cause of the exceptionally good clearances being the desire of the native merchants to get their goods into China proper and thus avoid the increased duty which becomes effective on August. Whites and greys show the greatest strength. Fancies are very erratic but business is possible with considerable risks. The price of rice has risen to such an extent that all business is affected.

Big Steel Shipment Coming On Monteagle

Nearly 2,000 Tons On C.P.O.S. Liner Arriving Friday To Stop Here Three Days

With a big cargo of steel, mails and a full list of passengers, the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services liner Monteagle is to arrive at Shanghai on Friday and will not sail for Hongkong until Monday morning. The Monteagle brings over 4,000 tons of cargo for this port. Nearly half of the cargo is steel.

Because of the big steel shipment, the Monteagle will come up the river and dock at China Merchants' Central Wharf. The liner left Vancouver on July 9.

BRITAIN INVESTIGATING ACQUIRED POSSESSIONS

Reports On African Colonies To Be Obtained, It Is Announced In Commons

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 23.—In the House of Commons today during question-time, Colonel Charles Amery, Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, stated that considerable information had already been collected and steps were being taken to obtain further reports on the natural resources and commercial prospects of the new British territories. South-west Africa had been brought within the area of His Majesty's Trade Commissioner for South Africa and East Africa would be specially investigated by the Trade Commissioner for British East Africa.

His Majesty's Trade Commissioner in New Zealand had already reported upon Samoa. Steps were being taken to obtain information with regard to openings for British trade in other territories. He understood that the mandate for territories not directly under the Dominions would be based on complete international equality therein.

BRITISH WARSHIPS USED TO CURB BOLSHEVISM

Commons Is Told Vessels Were In Baltic For Protection Of Coastal Communities

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 23.—In the House of Commons today during question-time, Mr. Walter Long stated British warships were being kept in the Baltic in order to prevent unprovoked Bolshevist raids on the coast towns of the Baltic States and Finland, interference with the feeding of the population and the spread of Bolshevist militarism. He was satisfied the forces were sufficient.

A British naval force had been operating in the Caspian since August, 1918, against many Bolshevist armed merchantmen, destroyers and submarines. The operations would be concluded and the personnel withdrawn before the winter.

PEKING RACE MEET

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 25.—Fifty subscription griffins costing $100 each were drawn for at the race-course this morning by thirty-six subscribers, eight of whom are Tientsin residents. Twenty-five ponies were obtained from Mr. Larsen and twenty-five from a well-known Mongol dealer. The ponies from Mr. Larsen's farm are in better condition than those from the Mongol dealer, but both lots appear to be of good average quality while some are very "likely-looking" animals.

"PRICELESS"

is a popular way of describing anything which has proved to be of exceptional value, and may therefore be employed to describe that old and favourite preparation—Beecham's Pills. The ever-increasing army of men and women who have experience of this excellent medicine generally use some such phrase as "priceless" or "Worth a guinea a box," when speaking of Beecham's Pills. This is certainly high praise. But it is well-merited. Beecham's Pills have proved, times out of number, to be a "priceless" preparation in the treatment of digestive ailments. They bring relief; they safeguard the health; they effect remarkable cures. All who suffer in any way from biliousness, sick headache, constipation, impaired appetite, and the resulting loss of energy and want of tone should take

IMPARTIAL AND PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, JULY 29, 1919

Japan Gets Kiaochow

THE Japanese ultimatum to Germany delivered August 15, 1914, said:

"Second—To deliver on a date not later than September 15 to the Imperial Japanese authorities, without condition or compensation, the entire leased territory of Kiaochow, with a view to the eventual restoration of the same to China."

Mark that: "The entire leased territory of Kiaochow, with a view to the eventual restoration of the same to China."

On August 24, 1914, Premier Okuma said in his now famous telegram to the Indpendent: "Japan has no ulterior motive, no desire to secure more territory, no thought of depriving China or other peoples of anything which they now possess."

When the peace delegates at Paris agreed to give to Japan the German rights in Shantung it was against the specific declaration of the Japanese delegates that Japan would restore the territory to China, retaining only German economic and railroad rights. That pledge has been reiterated again and again. And now—

Now it is announced from Paris that Japan will restore to China everything but economic control of the railways and will also receive possession of the German concession of Kiaochow.

Which makes a perfect unity in Japan's policy in the Far East during the war, a unity of which the one note is shameless and cynical faithlessness.

If one construes the Paris message by what it says on its face, then Japan is to keep everything that Germany had and give back what it never had any right to take as a belligerent. "Possession of the German Concession at Kiaochow—what can that mean except the whole area of 193 square miles that Germany wrested from China in 1898 as a nominal lease? And yet we had assumed that the most Japan could ask for, the most, in fact, it said it would ask for, was a part of Tsingtau as its own concession, while the whole port was internationalised; all this, of course, being in addition to the German economic and railway rights. Even the nefarious Twenty-one Demands, to which the Japanese Government put its signature, asked no more. That treaty specified that the whole of Kiaochow Bay was to be opened as a commercial port, that a concession was to be given Japan, that an international concession might be established if the foreign Powers desired it.

What, then, is Japan returning? That part of Shantung outside the German concession in Kiaochow. But that it never had any legitimate right to even by right of conquest. Except for the German concession the rest of China was neutral and Japan had no more right to set foot in any part of it than it would to seize the capital of Switzerland. And this, with a magnificent flourish, it returns—after having made sure that it has planted its influence unshakeably at all profitable points.

Well, at this stage of world politics one can deal with questions of international morality only relatively. Altruism was hardly the standard set up by the peace conference. And this is the heaviest price the Western Powers must pay for their failure to embody in the peace treaty the spirit as well as the letter of the idealism of their avowed program before the armistice: that their power of protest is weakened against any nation failing to measure up to that same idealism. But even with allowance made for that, every foreign resident of the Far East is swept by a surge of anger at the cynicism, injustice and flagrant immorality of the Far Eastern settlements in the peace treaty and the indefensible treatment of China. There is no greater irony in the war than that the one nation which of all the Allies comes out with a clear net profit, with the greatest positive gain, is the nation that did least and did that little grudgingly and only where it could profit thereby. It is a chapter of the history of the war which we shall prefer to skip in the future.

Correspondence

The Future Of Kuling

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—Shall Kuling Estate be governed as a British concession? This question will be answered August 9 in the Landrenters' Meeting at Kuling. By some of the Lotholders copies of the proposed Regulations and By-laws of the Kuling Estate have been received for "editorial correction" and careful considerations. Without venturing into a thorough examination of the twenty-one paragraphs of the By-laws, there are some very outstanding proposals that we must not pass without some consideration, and we should deem it very unwise if these Regulations and By-laws as they now appear should be adopted for the Kuling Estate.

In the Regulations, paragraph 18, we read: "The Council shall be liable to be sued, through their secretary, in His Brittanic Majesty's Court at Kiukiang," etc. But why could not the same rule be applied as in paragraph 16 and read: "————in the Consular or other Courts under whose jurisdiction the defaulters may be." If the proposed rule should be applied, will not the Council (paragraph 13) be bound always to appoint a secretary who is a British subject? What shall all the rest of us, who are not British subjects, say to this?

Should we also be willing to submit the power in full to the Municipal Council for approval or disapproval (see By-laws, paragraph 7) as to what kind of houses we hence are going to build or rebuild? Then how about it if some of our not English-speaking friends up here would wish to arrange for religious services in their own language and would be denied the use of the church (which we understand has been done to some in the past) and the Council would take the stand the Governor of Iowa, U.S.A., formerly took? The Council could then very easily disapprove, if the party concerned should plan to build a little church for their own use, not to mention all other inconveniences that could be caused the builder of a house.

We also have to ask: What power and authority are vested in surveyors of highways in England? When we read paragraph 23: "The Council, and none other————shall have all such power and authority as are vested in surveyors of highways in England."

Will it be possible or wise to try to get the Chinese to comply to a rule as stated in paragraph 37: "No owner or occupier of land or buildings outside of and abutting on the Kuling Estate shall be allowed to have an entrance or entrances to the Estate without a license first obtained from the Council." What would we all say and do if some Chinese should come to our homeland and try to make such rules for us?

What about wine shops, theater, billiard, bowling and dancing saloons, etc., not to speak about prostitution. Shall Kuling Estate in future be a place open for all such sort of things also? We read, paragraph 38: "No person shall . . . . . sell or vend any wines, spirits, beer, beverages, intoxicating or other drugs. . . . . without a license, renewable on the 1st January in every year first obtained from the Council." A similar rule applies to theater, circus, billiard, bowling or dancing saloon or pawnshops.

About arms, offensive or defensive, knives included, they should not be allowed to be carried through or into the Estate "Save with the written permission of His Majesty's Consul." As to this, we have a different rule applied to us as American citizens in China by our American Consul, which we surely all wish to remain under. But really how would the proposed rule strike us in time of war which we hope and pray God may save us from? and also this paragraph: "It shall be lawful for any officer or agent of the Council, and all persons called by him to his assistance to seize and detain any person . . . . . if he be a Chinese subject or a foreigner belonging to some nationality not represented by a Consul, to hand him to His Majesty's Consul to be disposed of according to law?"

If we ever should be favored with a local newspaper the person who should print or publish such paper would first have to obtain a license from the Council. And the selling of opium would also have to be done according to "a license first obtained from the Council and countersigned by His Majesty's Consul," according to our proposed By-laws.

We certainly esteem good order, regulations, and well applied by-laws, but why should we try to apply "the By-laws governing the British Concession in Hankow" here at Kuling, which yet is no British Concession? Why should not the proposed Regulations and By-laws in ample time be sent to all the Lot-holders for their consideration, and their criticism and suggestions be asked for, as well as to outsiders?

I remain,
A friend to order and good rule,
AMERICAN CITIZEN.

The Red Cross Hospital Again

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—The following footnote appeared to my letter in THE CHINA PRESS of Sunday, July 27. "The truth about hospital conditions is one thing, and deserves consideration, but why intrude the personality of other doctors especially on the score of nationality? Ed. C. P." As my letter was sent to all the local papers, I would like you to publish my reply.

1.—Being a Britisher I do not consider it my business to refer to doctors of other nationalities, as to what they do or otherwise.

2.—To my mind it is the daily duty of every true born, conscious Briton, to be ever ready, according to his station in life, to render aid and assistance to the poor and those in need.

3.—I have yet to learn that the British doctors have offered their assistance at the 20 operating beds at the Red Cross hospital.

4.—My reference to the German doctors was simply to point out that if a German can render good service in time of need, it is a pretty poor Britisher who cannot do likewise.

5.—The good work rendered by the German doctors, to poor people, might have been propaganda or self advertisment, but I am not dealing with the subjects of what they did for their own benefit, but the benefit that the poor received at their hands.

6.—I have visited the Red Cross Hospital again this morning, and saw many lying on the beds in the operating room waiting their turn to receive the injections. There was only one doctor in attendance, the other no doubt having a little rest. Now think all of you who could give professional services, what every minute means to those poor souls, lying there waiting for the minute that the doctor will be at liberty to start saving their lives.

Yours etc.,
MORBM. R.

Camera Milestones

By L. Godfrey-Turner
(London Chronicle)

If any man should ever doubt the progress of photography, I'll serve him right by getting out some early specimens of me. I'll open the album's brazen clasp where I'm in pinafore and frill, and if that doesn't make him gasp I don't suppose he ever will. . . . I sat upon a cushion decked in little squares with beads of steel. (The same were not, I recollect, particularly nice to feel.) A folding table by my side revealed a bent and dusty hinge; the chair (to which my sash was tied) was green, and had a faded fringe. And painted on a sort of screen behind me was an Alpine scene.

Further, the doubter I will show another prehistoric "snap" when I was 13 years or so, in knicker suit and Scottish cap. I stood beside a five-barred gate, one foot upon the lowest bar, and on a "whatnot" by the grate were paper poppies in a jar. Tight curls around my shoulders fell; my stockings white had darkish rings, which matched exceptionally well my boots with their elastic springs. (I cannot say exactly who performed this most artistic feat. Quite likely I was taken to some noted firm in Baker-street—the Mecca, even then, you see, of high-class photography.)

Again, when I was 23, and she and I were each's each, I had one taken by the sea (with her) on Yarmouth's busy beach. With hand upon her shoulder fair, I looked as tender as could be; while she, upright in canvas chair, obediently thought of me. 'Twas finished there upon the sands, and handed to me "framed complete." And I was principally hands, and she was principally feet. The children all about us swarmed, as round a Punch-and-Judy show. A box-perambulator formed the Photographic Studio; and he who "took" us by the tide was courtesy personified.

I leaned against a scratchy stile of virgin cork at 29. Today I look upon as vile the thing I once considered fine. I hate the square of woolly mat intended for a patch of grass. I hate the flat-brimmed bowler hat, which makes me look a silly ass. I hate the all-too-tidy square of handkerchief in pocket pressed. I hate the peak of maiden-hair behind the rose upon my breast. I hate the crutch-and-toothpick cane I'm holding with a folded glove. I hate that most atrocious painting of the setting sun above. And, incidentally, I hate that virgin corky stile or gate.

Today, at umpteen-five or so, I sit in a Cromwellian chair in photographic studio adorned with other treasures rare. A Duke awaits his turn without; an Honorable frets below; a Countess pulls the stock about and wonders when I mean to go. Soft music from the lounge I hear, with clank of tea-tray and of spoons. 'Tis here the Ladies Vere de Vere spend profitable afternoons. . . . My photo will a "work" be called. 'Twill have a Joshua Reynolds touch. The artist man will stand appalled should I forget and ask "How much" . . . A lady See. will write to me politely hinting at a "fee"!

Lovat Fraser On French's Book

Field-Marshal Viscount French's book, "1914," will probably come as a great surprise to those who have only heard of the controversies aroused as a consequence of its original publication in serial form in the Daily Telegraph. Instead of being a highly contentious narrative, it is as a matter of fact a fine and thrilling account of that epic campaign which was the culminating glory of the old British army, now almost extinct.

For this book is really the story of the "Old Contemptibles," the men of the small but highly trained Regular Army who saved the British Empire from destruction in the first few months of the war. Let there be no mistake about that. Had not the Regular Army fought with unyielding tenacity between August and November, 1914, the war might have had a very different ending.

Though small, it was forged of highly-tempered steel. It lacked big guns and high explosive shells, but it lacked nothing in exalted courage and the willingness to face death nobly. Its post on the left of the Allied line was of incomparable importance, in view of the method of flank envelopment in mass which was the essence of German strategy.

The "Old Contemptibles" were a race apart, and their few survivors remain so. They went forth silent and unseen, doing their duty without question, making no imperious claims upon the country, neither expecting nor caring for the plaudits of the market-place. It is meet that their great commander, who understood them and was trusted by them, should write their epitaph. Not a politician of the day who reads his story fairly will doubt his right to do so. All unconsciously, as it would seem, Lord French has written a very fine book, fine by reason of its very simplicity, its straightforwardness, its blunt and honest candor, its revealing picture of that old army of ours, of a type which can never now recur, marching forth against the hosts of Germany in the matter-of-fact way which was its wont.

I believe it is all to the good that our commanders in the Great War should record their experiences while the events are still comparatively fresh and vivid. I have said that Lord French has written a record of the "Old Contemptibles," and so he has, but what is of deeper interest and of far greater importance for future historians is that he has disclosed the workings of his own mind at all critical moments. How often do we find history speculating as to why a commander took this or that step at a crisis in a campaign! There will be no need to speculate about Lord French's decisions. He lays his reasons bare, and tells us why he ordered the retreat from Mons, why he could not fight before Paris, at what moment he became aware that von Kluck had changed front, why he left the Aisne and went to Flanders, and why—a scheme hitherto unrevealed—he was so eager to move along the Belgian coast after the first battle of Ypres.

The controversies of which we have heard so much occupy a very small space in the book, and I shall make no reference to them here. The volume contains many other deeply interesting discussions of which the public have heard nothing at all. Of these the revelation about the position at the end of the first battle of Ypres is of primary importance. To my mind, it is perhaps the most important passage in the whole book, because it shows where the Allies went wrong and why the war was so prolonged.

By the time it was seen that the Germans were firmly entrenched on the Aisne Lord French's mind turned instinctively to the Channel ports and the Belgian coast. He had written a paper shortly before the war urging that the Straits of Dover were no longer a sufficient protection, that they had become a river, and that in the event of attack it was imperative that Great Britain should hold a bridgehead on the French coast. When the first battle of Ypres began Sir Douglas Haig was instructed to move on Bruges with the 1st Corps, turn the enemy's flank and drive him back on Ghent. I believe the idea was to clear Belgium, if possible, as far as the line of the Scheldt.

As all the world knows, the move was never begun, for the enemy were in such superior strength that Haig was firmly held almost at the outset. The battle, in which we began by attacking, was almost instantly turned into a defensive operation in which Haig bore the brunt of the pressure. Later in the war it fell to Sir Douglas Haig's lot to plan and direct operations on a vast scale, but for the actual handling of troops in the field under his immediate command his military reputation must always rest upon his skilful extrication of his corps in the Mons retreat and his magnificent defense of the Ypres salient. Both were flawless, and in a war of lesser magnitude would have sufficed to place him on an unassailable pinnacle.

But when "First Ypres" was fought and won, Lord French instantly reverted to his project for regaining the Belgian coast as far as Zeebrugge. Mr. Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, was eager for the scheme and promised naval co-operation. Lord Kitchener concurred, and Sir Edward Grey telegraphed the whole plan to the French Government. General Joffre "turned it down." He wanted to attack in Champagne in 1915 and evidently did not care a straw about the Belgian coast. The French Government agreed with him, because they were then thinking more of the safety of Paris than of ultimate victory.

I lay the deepest stress on this chapter—the fifteenth in Lord French's book—and am dealing with it to the exclusion of almost everything else in the volume. I do so because it is a disclosure of transcendent importance. There and then, at the end of the first battle of Ypres, the Allies took a wrong turning which prolonged the war for years.

Had Lord French's plan been adopted, had we sent over a strong force of Territorials and obtained powerful reinforcements from our Allies, the Belgian coast might have been cleared that winter and the war would unquestionably have ended much earlier. It is of no use to blame Joffre and the French Government. Our own Government were even more culpable. On December 9, 1914, they were eager to advance in Belgium. On January 9, 1915, they were looking elsewhere. Why? Because meanwhile they had got the Dardanelles bee in their bonnet and were convinced that stalemate had been reached in the west.

What part Mr. Churchill played in this change of view is not disclosed, but clearly his first conclusion was right, and his subsequent Oriental impulse was wrong. Lord Kitchener had also turned, and recorded his views in the most unconvincing State paper I have ever read. He demonstrated that he had neither men, guns, nor munitions to spare for the Belgian coast, but the whole of his contentions are vitiated by the obvious fact that he found all these requirements for the tragic failure of the Dardanelles.

The Germans know where their own weak spot lay. Anyone who has examined, as I did in the last days of the war, the tremendous fortifications and armaments which they afterwards planted on the Belgian coast, must realise how much it meant to them. What we failed to do in the winter and spring of 1915 we tried in vain to accomplish in the summer and autumn of 1917. It is time to stop talking humbug about Passchendaele. The whole object of the Passchendaele attack was to clear the Belgian coast. We even formed an "Iron Division" for this purpose. The Royal Navy was to co-operate if our troops reached Roulers, which they were quite unable to do. But we could have done it early in 1915 if we had not been led astray by a false dawn in the East.

There are dozens of other problems on which Lord French's book throws equal light, and it will probably be turned to for information when the very name of Mr. Asquith is forgotten, because mankind infinitely prefers doers of deeds to spinners of words.

Mark Twain On Nationalities

"The vast majority of temperaments are pretty equally balanced. The intensities are absent, and this enables a nation to learn to accommodate itself to its political and religious circumstances and like them, be satisfied with them, and at last prefer them.

"Nations do not think; they only feel. They get their feeling at second hand through their temperaments, not their brains. A nation can be brought by force of circumstances, not argument, to reconcile itself to any kind of government or religion that can be devised. In time it will fit itself to the required conditions. Later it will prefer them and will fiercely fight for them.

"As instances you have all history—the Greeks, the Romans, the Persians, the Egyptians, the Russians, the Germans, the French, the English, the Spanish, the Americans, the South Americans, the Japanese, the Chinese, the Hindus, the Turks; a thousand wild and tame religions, every kind of government that can be thought of from tiger to house cat; each nation knowing it has the only true religion and the only sane system of government; each nation despising all the others; each an ass and not suspecting it; each proud of its fancied supremacy; each perfectly sure it is the pet of God; each with undoubting confidence summoning Him to take command in time of war; each surprised when He goes over to the enemy, but by habit able to excuse it and resume compliments.

"In a word, the whole human race content, persistently content, indestructibly happy, thankful, proud, no matter what its religion is nor whether its master be tiger or house cat. Am I stating facts? You know I am. Is the human race cheerful? You know it is. Considering what it can stand and be happy, you do me too much honor when you think that I can place before it a system of cold facts that can take the cheerfulness out of it. Nothing can do that. Everything has been tried. Without success. I beg you not to be troubled."

Heaps Of Priceless Rubies In Mogok

Mogok is a Burmese city which handles daily large fortunes in rubies. Mogok runs heaps of priceless, glittering stones through its fingers, appraises them carelessly, and then as carelessly lets them go to some dealer in gems. It almost seems like the play of children with bits of bright colored glass, writes Niksah.

To the ruby bazar of Mogok, from the mines of Burma, are sent the finest rubies in the world. Buyers from Burmese cities and also foreigners from important firms come here to barter for gems. Languidly they toy with the precious drops of pink and red, quickly rejecting a stone because of an almost imperceptible flaw, and keeping covetous eyes on a perfect stone.

There is no hurry, no pulling out of timepieces, or even looking up at the sun. Foreigners affect the careless interest of the gambler, and natives display their usual inherent indifference.

Outside the city for miles around, miners are leisurely unearthing more gems. The "get rich quick" idea has never gained a strong hold on the natives of this eastern treasure district.

With measured swing the Burmese laborers dig up the grayish clay in which the stones are embedded. Other laborers separate stones from sand clay, or clean the dirt from the gems.

At the easy pace with which Burma draws upon its store of treasure, its mountains will long be a source of enormous wealth.

Fielding And Fish

Henry Fielding, a lover of digressions, even in his novels—and who would wish these little essays fewer?—asked in the account of his voyage to Lisbon: "What then ought in general to be so plentiful, what so cheap, as fish? What then so properly the food of the poor? So in many places they are, and so might they always be in great cities, which are always situated near the sea, or on the conflux of large rivers." He then asked why in London the case is so far otherwise. "That, except that of sprats, there is not one poor palate in a hundred that knows the taste of fish."

Fielding might be writing this today of Boston, where we are told to eat fish on account of the high cost of meat, where fish is so dear. He did not search deeply into the cause of the evil at London, but he proposed remedies. (He had been a fearless magistrate.) Possibly these remedies may seem drastic to some, especially to dealers, but the great majority of men and women will read with grim approval.

"I humbly submit the absolute necessity of immediately hanging all the fishmongers within the bills of mortality; and, however it might have been some time ago the opinion of mild and temporising men that the evil complained of might be removed by gentler methods, I suppose at this day there are none who do not see the impossibility of using such with any effect. . . . For surely, if a few monopolising fishmongers could defeat the excellent scheme of the Westminster market, to the erecting which so many justices of peace, as well as other wise and learned men, did so vehemently apply themselves . . . It would be a vain endeavor for any other body of men to attempt to remove so stubborn a nuisance. If it should be doubted whether we can bring this case within the letter of any capital law now subsisting, I am ashamed to own it cannot; for surely no crime better deserves such punishment; but the remedy may, nevertheless, be immediate, and if a law was made at the beginning of next season, to take place immediately, by which the starving thousands of poor was declared to be felony without benefit of clergy, the fish-mongers would be hanged before the end of the session."—Philip Hale, in Boston Herald.

WANT BURGOYNE'S DRUMS

Captured By American Revolutionists, Now Sought By British

If any one has the drums of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, thought to have been lost in this country in 1776 when that ancient regiment came over on the business of the King, the regiment will very much appreciate news concerning their whereabouts. Officers of the regiment have sought through official channels to learn from the War Department whether truth and tradition agree as to the fate of the drums. Tradition says that the drums were lost when the regiment, then known as the North British Fusiliers, fell a victim to the superior fighting ability of an American colonial force in the Revolutionary War.

It is a serious thing for a regiment to lose its colors or standards, drums or other precious ornaments of regimental pride—as serious as the life of the regiment itself—and the loss of these drums in the American Revolution probably accounts for the change in the name of the regiment. As the Royal Scots Fusiliers the regiment now stands as one of the most famous in the British Army, its record in the present war being unusually noteworthy. This record has revived interest in the regiment's history, hence the plea for news of the drums. If they can be found in this country much will be added to their significance by the fact they are missed by the original owners.

But the drums are more important as reminders of a victory which itself is a record of the fate which pursues an unprepared army. According to the books, Burgoyne's little army was as good as the best in Europe, yet it was whipped to an ignominious surrender by a group of half organised American colonists. Brilliantly accoutered, Burgoyne's men went through their parade ground battle drill with courage and precision, and while they were at it the Americans from points of vantage in the woods shot them to pieces. In 1898 American troops repeated Burgoyne's error, not with red uniforms, but with black powder against the smokeless powder of the Spanish. If these drums can be found they should be preserved as a constant reminder of what happens to an army which lags behind the world's progress.—Indianapolis News.

SOME SUBURBAN WOLVES

Nine Cubs And Their Mother Caught Near St. Louis

The capture of a wolf and nine cubs within fifty miles of St. Louis makes a good animal story. As the scene was over the river in Illinois there is no warrant to charge Missouri with getting to be wild and woolly. Now that this squad of four-legged guerrillas has been rounded up some admiration can be expressed for their keen and courageous strategy in getting inside the lines. The wolf lingers long as civilization closes in. In 1705 the last wolf in Ireland was killed by a man whose name is preserved. Wolves existed in England almost as long, in spite of the island limits. The tribe needs watching in many parts of the United States. Its appetite for sheep and calves has never been impaired. In cunning it equals the fox, its relative at no great remove. Science has not settled the question of the dog's descent from the wolf. Much credit is due to the wolf if it is a possible dog. Wolf cubs have been domesticated, but, as a rule, grow up without much affection for man. They never approach the finer type of dogs in any respect. But time and enlightened conditions are great improvers. The beautiful and amiable Jersey cow has little in common with its shaggy ancestors. Kind treatment mainly accounts for the evolution.

Rudyard Kipling's poem on the life led by wolves is one of his most striking and original productions, and nowhere else can there be found research into the habits of wolves and "the laws of the pack." Wolves observe laws of their own making with unfailing tenacity and regularity. Theirs is a perpetual martyrdom of hunger, and yet they are always faithful to their savage code. In gaunt endurance they train themselves to the limit.

A farmer will say all this is very well, but a wolf is always a wolf, and that a wolf scalp is better.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MONGOL PRINCE'S VISIT TO JAPAN DISQUIETING

Announcement Made Concerning Disposition Of Forces Along Border

(Reuter's Service)

Peking, July 24.—The Chinese press says that Prince Palata, Chief of the Konchin Banner and former Amban at Altai, is in Japan and that some apprehension is felt concerning his visit. The papers that oppose General Hsu's expedition express the belief that the Prince later on will stir up ill feeling among the Mongols towards China and perhaps cause a rebellion.

Semi-officially it is admitted that Prince Palata's attitude is uncertain and that trouble may arise from that source. It is understood that instructions have been sent to the Chinese Charge d'Affaires in Tokio to ascertain what the prince is doing.

The Shuntien Shih Pao reports that Marshal Tuan has drafted a scheme for the disposition of the Frontier Defense Forces, as follows:

One division and a brigade to be stationed on the Sinkiang border; two brigades at Kansu; two brigades in Outer Mongolia; two brigades at Jehol; two at Charhar, and two at Suiyuan; two divisions on the Mukden border; one division and a brigade at Kirin, and one division and a brigade in Heilungkiang. These troops are to be drawn from the "War Participation troops" but if that force cannot furnish sufficient men General Lung Chi-kuang's troops will be drawn upon.

Interviewed regarding this report today a Chinese official said that it could not yet be stated whether Marshal Tuan was working with or against General Chang Tso-lin. The inclusion of Heilungkiang, Kirin and Mukden in the regions to be occupied by the Frontier Defense forces would certainly require arrangement with the Mukden General. He was of opinion that General Hsu was negotiating such an arrangement, which could probably be carried out if suitable recompense were offered. Otherwise Marshal Tuan's program would considerably limit the scope of General Chang Tso-lin.

According to another report a mixed brigade of the Frontier Defense Force will be stationed at Harbin and Heiho. Concerning this report a high Chinese official said that he knew nothing about it but if true it seemed to him like the first step to replace the Chinese guards on the Chinese Eastern Railway by Frontier Defense troops, which would supply the motive for the frontier defense scheme, a motive hitherto very obscure. It is very interesting, however, he added, because there are indications that Japan may give way on the Shantung question and make certain demands in regard to Manchuria and the Chinese Eastern Railway.

BOLSHEVIKI IN SIBERIA MAKING NEW ADVANCES

Official Report To Harbin Is That Troops In West Are Still In Retreat

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, July 24.—An official communique from the Siberian front reports:

In the Eastern sector, north of Ekaterinburg, we have withdrawn to Alapatievsk, where we are successfully opposing the pressure of the enemy in the direction of Ekaterinburg. We are holding our old positions.

There is fighting in the Zlatoust region, forty versts east of Zlatoust.

North of the Samara-Zlatoust railway we have defeated the enemy, who fled, leaving prisoners wounded and a quantity of ammunition and rifles.

In the Orenburg direction our advancing troops have carried Menovol-Dvor station, five versts from Orenburg. No news has been received for the Southern and Northwestern sectors.

Troops Coming Back

Harbin, July 24.—Reuter's correspondent is reliably informed from Vladivostok that the Russian and American detachments which are accomplishing the clearing of the Suchansk region from the Bolshevists were recently joined by Japanese troops. It is understood the expedition will soon complete its task and return to Vladivostok.

Report Attacks Repulsed

London, July 21.—On the Northwest Russian front:

In the direction of Ostroff and Porkoff all the attacks of the enemy have been repulsed, the villages of Yazykovo and Tormino seven miles east of Pskoff have been retaken, and the Bolshevists have suffered four thousand casualties.

South of the Baltic railway, in the direction of Gatchina, an offensive is developing, two battalions of enemy troops have been destroyed and the Reds have captured the village of Prouzhitay.

Reds Make New Gains

London, July 21.—An East Russia communique reports:

The Bolshevists have occupied Cherdin and continue to advance eastward of Ekaterinburg and also eastward of Zlatoust.

Owing to a landing of the Bolshevists in the rear of General Denikin the latter has retired and now holds positions at Serekrakovskaya, a hundred miles southwest of Astrakhan. On the Dnieper front General Denikin's troops hold the line of the Dnieper river to the sea.
